

User Persona: Alex, the "Overthinking Coder-Writer"

Demographic

- Name: Alex Chen
- Age: 28
- Occupation: Software Developer and Hobbyist Writer
- Tech Proficiency: High; comfortable navigating and operating within a Command Line Interface (CLI).

Pain and Frustration

- Alex frequently suffers from "blank page syndrome" when trying to start a new creative writing piece.
- They easily lose momentum due to overthinking during the initial brainstorming phase.
- They dislike bloated software and are frustrated by tools that require cloud connectivity or compromise privacy, preferring strict local data ownership.

Needs and Goals

- Alex needs a tool that forces spontaneous association to break through creative blocks.
- They want a minimalist, distraction-free environment to focus solely on their daily writing exercises.
- They have a goal to track their progress offline, wanting to view basic session statistics like word count and time elapsed stored in a local database.
- They need an application with zero-latency that feels incredibly responsive during high-pressure writing prompts.
